

Our Solutions

Industries – Manufacturing

As manufacturers accelerate the drive to operate globally, access to information around the world is becoming more critical. You need to enter new markets, expand into new geographies, and improve earnings by using resources around the globe.

Globalization is stretching enterprise information technology structures to their breaking points. To excel and thrive, you must focus on these key areas:

- Customer relationship management (CRM), to strengthen ties with existing customers and convert prospects into new customers
- Supply chain management (SCM), to maximize efficiency and improve response to changing conditions
- IT strategy and development, to gain the most effective business strategy by optimizing the power of the Internet.

Many leading manufacturers turn to our proven technology architectures to host key applications, including many Web-based and customer-facing systems. We also support and perform non-core business processes – such as human resource management and travel expense reporting – allowing clients to focus on core competencies and processes critical to business success.
